

by the relationship between the credit grantor, which originates and controls that data, and the data furnisher's role as the "intermediary" between the creditor and the consumer reporting agency. Maintaining and reporting accurate credit data will necessarily be a cooperative effort between the creditor and all other businesses engaged by the creditor to perform collection and data furnishing services. As this legislation moves to conference committee, I will continue to study the date of delinquency issue in hopes that the data furnishers who establish and follow the reasonable procedure requirements created in H.R. 2622 are not subject to unreasonable enforcement actions.

I urge my colleagues to support this fair rule and support the bill.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I compliment the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY) and the ranking member for their efforts in this regard. As was said earlier, while the bill is not perfect, it does make significant improvements, and these came about during the bipartisan committee process.

With that in mind, I would hope that we would understand that strengthening consumers' rights is always a part of our responsibility. The one regret that we have is that the amendment of the gentlewoman from Oregon (Ms. HOOLEY) that was offered that was not made in order which would allow for criminal penalties for identity theft does seem to be a make-sense proposition, and hopefully at some point in the future, it will be undertaken in a positive way, which I believe will assist consumers.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this debate today, this opportunity to talk about the Fair Credit Reporting Act with not only the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS) and his colleagues on his side of the aisle, but my colleagues on this side of the aisle, we give thanks for a lot of hard work that has taken place.

The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) from the Committee on Financial Services, began the process, was a leader in the identity theft issue. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY) and the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. BACHUS) have done a fabulous job, but let us not forget the work that we did together with the ranking member, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK) and others on the Democratic side, to ensure that this bill has the necessary protections.

I thank the staff director of the Committee on Rules Billy Pitts, and Josh Saltzman and Adam Jarvis, who are with the Committee on Rules, and from the White House we received a great deal of hard work from Elen Liang representing President Bush. I would like to thank them for their strong work. I support this rule and the underlying legislation, and I urge all of my colleagues to support it also.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.
